In presenting the Eliwanda tract of land to the public, we desire to give a simple statement of facts, and can do no better than by quoting the following article from a recent issue of the Riverside Press and Horticulturist, written by its editor after a careful investigation of both the land and the water system: Eliwands is located at the foet of the moun-tains, six miles east of the celebrated Cuca-mongo vineyards, at an elevation of from 1,000 tains, six miles east of the celebrated Cuca-mongo vineyards, at an elevation of from 1,000 to 1,600 feet above-sea level, and about forty-five miles from the ocean in a direct line. The tract, when complete, will consist of from 3,000 to 4,000 acres and verhaps more, and will extend from the mountains on the north to the Southern Pacific Railroad on the South, where Etiwanda station will be established as on similar soit.

The water supply comes from two canyons in the mountains. The Etiwanda Water Company absolutely own these two water privileges. No one else has any rights in them; the rights are undisputed and the streams are never failing. These water rights are as good as any in Southern Californis, and the title and quantity of water being beyond question, set at rest one of the most vexatious and important question connected with horticultural pursuits in this country.

A remarkable fact connected with the rapid development of our northwestern territories is that the better we are made acquainted with them the more valuable do they prove to be for the uses and pursuits of civilized man. Vast areas which, not long since, were placed upon the map as arid deserts, bleak mountains, or impracticable wildernesses, are now transformed into fruitful fields, rich paston all rate in the sparkth, all inviting the steady settler or daring adventurer to come in and possess them. Scaling the bad lands of Dakota, which for many years were the boundary of white settlements, and following the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad, a large portion of the great Territory of Wyoming is proven fertile and practicable and profitable to the agriculturist; and onward to Oregon and the Pacific are already seen the smoke of the settler's camp and cottage fire in a blue line across the continent.

the fabulous swamps of Saskatchewan, on closer inspection and experiment, the fabulious swamps on descriment, have been proven excellent sites for teeming wheat fields, and the arctic possessions of the old Hudson's Bay Company, once only esteemed for the peltries they yielded, are now deemed worthy the attention of capitalists and colonists, under the lead of British noblemen, whose lessening incomes from patrimonial estates admonish them to seek new theaters of action.

The Sunday Law,

Sierra Tribune.] The Democratic Convention at San Jose, after considerable hesitation, declared against a Sunday law. Without doubt, it was done with fear and trembling, and contrary to their secret inclinations; for the old-time Democrat was deeply reverent of sacred things. He imposed the same feeling on his family and dependents. Each Sunday found him in attendance at the old square-framed church, listening closely to the services of the day. The same is true to-day, especially in the rural communities, and the Convention in passing that resolution no doubt did violence to the convictions of a large majority of the rank and file of their party associates. But the support of the "League of Freedom" must be gained, and so they ventured on what in the end will prove an unwise course.

Wulluctual After years of trial and experience, we have proved that by a combination of chemicals, which have an affinity for dirt and grease, we are able to give the public a soap which, if used according to directions on wrappers, will thoroughly cleans clothes without the use of a washboard. We guarantee it not to injure the finest fabric. Made by the CAPITAL SOAP CO., Sacramento, and for sale by BURCH & BOAL, 71 SPRING STREET, opposite Post Office.

revealed to inquiring minds the peculiar unpleasantness of the Neosho country and the dreary difficulties of the Great American desert, and now realize with surprise that the regions beyond are made facile and practicable for the slower going as well as for the adventurous and enterprising. The question arises, were we wrong in our first conceits in regard to the properties and capacities of those vast regions, or have the elements at man's service for subduing and occupying them become correspondingly more efficient?

When we call to mind the state of things in this respect at the time Fremont and Carson followed the buffalo tracks over the Rockies, or even when the Mormons made their hegira from Illinois to Deseret, and compare them with the present, we must admit that nature had then completed her work in preparing those great theaters for the uses of men, and that, with the increase of the country's wealth and population, the inventive and industrial Insurance Agent and Collector.
